

EAR POCKETS

Picture on the left - Showing the wrap around the back of the ear. This ear has what is called a "pocket"- where the ear will fall to the outside of the head, and it looks as if the ear is pushed out. I have placed a spare piece of backer rod into the pocket, and will wrap the "extra flap" or if you prefer- the uncut edge of ear skin forward.

Picture on the right- just below my thumb- to the left of the end of tape - is a pocket in the ear (where the star is). Pockets are common, and relatively easy to fix, you just have to be diligent.

Showing the base of the ear fully taped. You can see the extra piece of backer rod poking through the bottom of the ear, and you can see how the ear skin is wrapped around the rod.

You can fix pockets with out using backer rod as the post- you can use the zip ties or any other method you prefer. I have used backer rod, cotton balls, Qtip ends..you name it... for pocket filler.
